Catawba–Duke rivalry The Catawba–Duke rivalry is an American college basketball rivalry between the Catawba Indians men's basketball team of Catawba College in Salisbury, North Carolina and the Duke Blue Devils men's basketball team of Duke University in Durham, North Carolina. Catawba

Catawba is the second-oldest college basketball team in North Carolina. Although there are only two other colleges in North Carolina, the Catawba men's basketball team is closely tied to North Carolina A&T, and A&T has consistently competed in the men's ACC Championship. In fact, the records for the team over the years are almost identical to that of A&T. In the 1950s, Catawba gained a national reputation with two "outsiders" from Connecticut College, Dwight Bowen and Bob McAdoo, having success on the hardwood. Duke Blue Devils started competing in basketball in 1888. The men's basketball team plays its home games in Cameron Indoor Stadium (formerly the Pete

Taylor), which opened in 1990. Over the years, the Duke men's basketball team has claimed the national championship twice, in 1939 and in 1982. Duke has an established strong rivalry with the North Carolina Tar Heels. Their men's basketball teams have met in 136 games in the regular season and in the ACC Championship, and an additional 24 games in the NCAA tournament, with the Tar Heels holding a
