Q: Android - Detect User Entering Multiple Text Fields In Activity I have four EditText boxes on my main activity, and would like to know if there is a way to detect a user entering multiple text fields in the activity. I know I can do this using the `onFocusChangeListener()`, and once the user focuses on a EditText Box, I need to know whether the user has entered text. Type 1 diabetes mellitus is an autoimmune disease leading to the destruction of pancreatic islet cells in which insulin production is blocked. The critical factors that cause the immune system to destroy the beta cells in type 1 diabetes are still not known. A major problem in studying the role of autoimmunity in type 1 diabetes is that multiple factors are involved in the etiology of the disease and can act on both autoimmunity and beta cells. Previous attempts to develop rodent models of type 1 diabetes have suffered from failure to utilize recently recognized genetic determinants of this disease. Our ultimate goal is to develop an animal model of autoimmune type 1 diabetes which will reflect the genetic and pathogenic similarities to the human disease, and in which beta cell dysfunction can be accurately monitored. We have already demonstrated that the genetic- induced diabetic nonobese diabetic (NOD) mouse develops type 1 diabetes. We hypothesize that, because multiple genes are involved in the etiology of type 1 diabetes in humans, it will be possible to produce a model of autoimmune type 1 diabetes in NOD mice by breeding back mice selected for their low susceptibility to type 1 diabetes and other autoimmune diseases. To test this hypothesis, we will screen F2 mice from multiple backcrossing generations for their susceptibility to type 1 diabetes. In addition, we will test the development of autoimmune diabetes in mice that are resistant to autoimmune diabetes. Analysis of the genetic background of the mice that are resistant to type 1 diabetes will allow further characterization of the genetic background of the NOD mouse, and permit mapping of diabetes susceptibility genes. We also intend to develop a diabetic mouse model that will enable the study of pathogenic mechanisms of islet cell destruction that are shared by type 1 diabetes, and thereby allow correlation of the findings in the diabetic animal model with human type 1 diabetes. In the final part of this proposal, we will develop a technique to study the role of autoimmunity in type 1 diabetes. Since each animal develops type 1 diabetes at a different time during the study, we will design a time-of-disease study to determine whether the timing of the disease process is independent of autoimmunity. The proposed studies will test the hypothesis that autoimmunity is a critical factor in
