- Load event and you can update WxStation Data for a short time - Press CTRL+Q for data export and then press C-X-Q to export updated data for 2 hours. - Press CTRL+I to view station number, location, current and previous data for 2 hours. Need to install an update and it won't let me. In the installation window I select only 1 option: Install update from list of available updates. It just stays there, Windows still thinks it's in Safe mode. I then select "Update and Recovery" and then click OK. BUT the result is that it doesn't start the update. I'm now stuck with a win10 machine that won't let me do anything. I need to convert two files to jpg format. The one is the picture from "Feed your head" and the other one is from "Flash flood". I would like to do it through batch or through a script. I tried to use "convert" but it is not working. I have 7/7/2017 and it should be working. To follow up, the official solution is the following: 1) Copy the file "README.zip" from the bottom of the download link below into a directory named "ZOOMBIE_1.01". 2) Copy the files "README_1.01.zip" and "README_1.01.zip.gz" from the bottom of the download link below into a directory named "ZOOMBIE_1.01". 3) Then use the following command to extract the file "README_1.01.zip" with the "unzip" command: unzip -p -q "ZOOMBIE_1.01\README_1.01.zip" I have a problem with the numlock key function of my laptop. When I'm using any computer (windows and linux) it's working. But if I'm using a laptop (acer) it's not working. I've reinstalled windows 10, but the same problem persists. Is it possible to fix this problem without changing my keyboard? A: If you start an executable by double clicking on it (the desktop icon of an exe file or the installer of a standalone exe file), Windows will only show you the application, not the installation wizard that allows to install applications from the Windows Store. 1d6a3396d6
