Updated: As per the AppleÂ .With her wild purple hair and rainbow eyeliner, makeup artist Katie Delaney has become one of Broadway's most notorious faces. Delaney — whose childhood name was Katie Flanigan but was given her current moniker at age 4 — is known for letting her makeup run wild, refusing to ever attempt to match her client's skin tone.

Instead, the 51-year-old says, she tries to make her clients look “unrecognizable” by applying the same formula to them all.

Delaney’s DIY approach has gotten her increasingly recognized on the streets of NYC as well as on the red carpet of awards ceremonies such as the Tony Awards, where she’s become a fixture of the proceedings. Delaney, who has been working on Broadway for over 30 years, recently sat down with VF.com to discuss her career and the particular brand of chaos that’s become her trademark.

Here, she opens up about the pressures of being a makeup artist, the perils of her makeup chair, and why she loves doing TV spots for liquor brands. Have you always been a makeup artist? How and when did you begin? I'm the daughter of a classical pianist and a doctor. My parents gave up on my mother's career and spent a lot of time teaching me how to read music. My father, who was a theater producer, was very busy. There was no time to get a career going. I started getting stage makeup when I was 4, and I worked my way up to putting my mom's makeup on her face because my mother wasn't allowed in a beauty parlor. By age 13 I was in theater. At 18 I left home and went to New York City, where I worked for four years in off-Broadway theaters. I would do makeup there and act in tiny productions. It was a great experience for my first career. I worked
