The Fenris Commandars The free trading Fenris are under identical influences, but overall, there's a bit of a difference in tone. To be loyal to the people, they're more like the administrators we see in the gaming world. They adhere to a strict code of ethics; every other aspect of their lives is also regulated to the extreme degree that it makes them a horrible bunch of people. They're... Fufu B/X fits this well. They're neither geniuses nor madmen. As Black Belladonna says in _For a Few Copper Crowns_, "The Fenris are simple creatures, following a set of simple principles: loyalty, respect, honour and truth. The Fenris don't care about money, they certainly don't _need_ money. They care only about what they believe is right and the best way to do what is expected of them. The Fenris are hard workers who sometimes have to be stern in their work to get it finished—otherwise, the work would never be done." Fenris Honour Fenris are extremely devoted to their code of honour. As _1001 Cthulhu Tales_ states: "They who hate dishonour live by honour. Disobedience is the crime against themselves, and what other god demands that any citizen should ever be browbeaten into subservience?... Those who break the laws they have made of their souls are less than beasts. The laws declare no other gods than the Fenris, and to them alone it is permitted to disobey."
