Lowering the temperature in the renal tissue by 3 degrees C attenuated injury in this preparation. The protective effect of renal hypothermia was reflected in reduced increases in renal inulin and oxygen extraction. While either normothermia or hypothermia alone failed to improve renal function, protective effects were additive.Obesity in Denmark It is estimated that the prevalence of obesity in Denmark is 39.5% and among adults it is estimated at 26.9%. Prevalence Prevalence of obesity by BMI: 1980s: 14% 2000s: 23% 2010s: 26% Obesity is one of the major public health concerns in Denmark. Between 2000 and 2007 a significant increase in the prevalence of obesity was observed among both women and men, except for women aged 60 to 80, where prevalence did not change significantly. Obesity in Danish children Denmark has the highest prevalence of obesity in Europe, with a mean prevalence of 16.5% among girls and 10.3% among boys aged 9 to 13, with a rate of 2.1% of morbid obesity. In 2008, there were 4000 obese children in Denmark. Economy In Denmark, increasing healthcare costs have been associated with the increasing prevalence of obesity. Between 1990 and 2000 the national healthcare spending rose from about 4.2 to 5.8% of GDP. In 1990 there were only about 150,000 obese Danes, in 2007 about 14.2% of the population were overweight and almost 7.9% were obese. References Category:Health in Denmark"The psalm was written by David, the son of Jesse and a devoted follower of God. It is included as part of the prayers for the Feast of the Passover, when God's victory over the Egyptians was celebrated and his deliverance of his people from slavery was recalled.
