The Revenant Dual Audio

the revenant is not just a movie, it's a true story and an epic story. it tells the story of the unfortunate fate of hugh glass, the trapper from the plains of the american west who was adopted by a tribe of native americans and lived with them for many years. two audio options are available with 'the revenant': english dd 2.0 stereo and french audio dts 5.1 surround audio. audio quality is top-notch, with excellent audio sync, and adequate separation of dialog and effects. there is one caveat with the surround track: dialog doesn't quite ring through the back speakers as it should. this issue is negligible, and doesn't effect the overall experience. the dts track is, by far, the best audio experience in this home release. the track is immersive, and the bass is quite deep. in fact, you'll be hard-pressed to notice any flaws in the dts track. the dd track isn't bad, either, but i found the mix to be slightly less immersive. additionally, sound effects are a bit more muted than in the surround mix. be warned that 'the revenant' has a number of moments that are extremely violent, with realistic sounds, and blood splattering sounds and images. this is not a film for the faint of heart, but it is a great film. it is a true classic that leaves you speechless for days after watching it. 'the revenant' is both a baroque and brutal masterpiece. it's a magnificent and lyrical portrait of life in the wilderness. it's a work of art, and it's also a cautionary tale. a fable and a morality play. as cinematic as any we've seen in the past year, but as vivid as the wildest dreams of any explorer.

The Revenant Dual Audio

It's taken me a while but I'm starting to warm up to seeing the reviews for 'The Revenant' and I'm starting to realize how good it is. I'm a little slow to the point of having a queasy stomach from not being able to handle what I read...that in itself is just as awesome as the actual film itself. I can't thank you Irritu enough for what you've done with the frame, you've given us as a cinema audience a better experience in terms of knowledge, what was seen and what was not, and every little thing that you do, ends up being one of the most important parts of the film. People will be seeing 'The Revenant' all over the place now, once it's out, and I would just like to say, welcome to the club you've joined. I'm proud to know you as one of my inspirations, and if you ever need any help with a script or a director, I'll be here to help if I can. StephanieD. Smith 'The Revenant' is an easy winner for this category. At the beginning of the film, we are only vaguely aware of what happened to the characters in the beginning of the film, and what happened to Hugh Glass (DiCaprio), the main character. At this point, you are still trying to figure out what happened, and the reason that the characters are in this situation. The other characters are just ordinary men, chasing an ideal that Hugh Glass was chasing. They don't realize that they are there for all of these characters, and to them, it is a dull and repetitive journey. The cast of 'The Revenant' is as impressive as they come. DiCaprio is as ever, perfectly comfortable as the wandering spirit of a man who has seen too much life. Carey Mulligan has a very wide eyes that really shows her new outlook in life after the attack. The people who are along with Hugh Glass are what makes this movie so good. To see the way that these people follow the same rut everyday, and to see the way they can adjust to any obstacle in their way really brings out this movie's humanity. The people you're with when you're out of luck are the ones who matter. 5ec8ef588b
