Where does it stand out from the rest? Well, there are so many ball heads on the market at this price point and 3 Legged Thing does everything you'd expect from one. It's a ball head, which means it will be stable, easy to use and rock heavy. There was no problem with the quality of 3LT's head. It's the accessories. The cable is of a standard quality you'd expect from so-called budget equipment like this. It's comfortable to use and the viewfinder is highly adjustable. The only thing I wish it had was a bit more stability during panning. This really needs to be sorted. The only other thing that really stands out for me is the lens that 3LT ships their heads with. Specifically the 41mm ELF 1.8, which is a fantastic lens that I've had for a while and use all the time. This is another aspect that really showed how good the ELF 1.8 really is, as 3LT has actually managed to source a brand new 41mm ELF with T1.8. Awesome! Cheap ball heads are hit and miss. They often use the same budget plastics and often have those cheap feel head knobs. They are also not very rock heavy and the cable is rubbish. 3 Legged Thing however, came up with a fantastic head at a price that is just... you know, affordable. It's a very good head at a very fair price. For something so well made, it's a very good head. Now, I'm not saying I've played it a 1000 games with it and did a million tests, that wouldn't be me saying that. But I'm confident that even if you're an experienced user, you'll still find this to be a competent head. I've been using it for a few months now and it has only performed as you'd expect a good ball head to.

The thing about this head, with its capacity and feeling, is that it does feel like a head built with ball heads in mind. If 3Legged Thing had just used a mechanism to press the load into the head, like a threaded collar with a detent like the RRS, this sort of capacity would never have been possible. The detents are a perfect compromise of size, capacity and feel. Unfortunately they are not compatible with RRS. That aside, this is a fantastic performer. You can walk around town with it attached to your camera with no problem, and it will remain surprisingly stable even with large loads in excess of 50kg. The high capacity, together with the balance and feel makes this a perfect choice for anything from moving objects and cakes to safety balls and balloons. This head also has a standard rocker bar to help loosen and tighten it. The surface finish is matte to help reduce stiction and I found it was very easy to loosen and tighten. As mentioned, it is manufactured by a company that has been making ball heads for years and I have not found any evidence that they are anything less than first class. I would strongly recommend this head for anyone that requires a high capacity ball head that can also feel comfortable and stable under load. Aside from the weight of the head, I could not find any negatives in using this ball head. It feels great, looks great and works great. For those that need to move around a lot of, this feels like the head they should have always been using. Sadly, this is not the first time that 3LT have used an air press to attach ball heads. Their previous ball head, the BH-27 came with the same system, and just like this one, it was also a well built and professional product. 5ec8ef588b
