“We are thrilled to introduce our brand-new ‘HyperMotion Technology’ to FUT 22,” said FIFA Director of Game Development Nick Channon. “As a player myself, I absolutely love the feeling of the ball moving seamlessly around in your feet, and feel like we’ve come up with a way to capture that movement while also retaining a true sense of ball speed.” The introduction of “HyperMotion Technology” is another milestone in the history of FIFA, which has also seen the introduction of the first “FIFA Ultimate Team” cards back in 1993, as well as the debut of “FIFA Street” in 1999. Contradiction may ruin the party. When it comes to billionaire entrepreneurs and political funders, this truism is particularly true. For the purpose of this article, though, let's set aside the fact that Mitt Romney is the country's former nominee for president. Let's overlook his prediction that voters will fall in line by congratulating the Republican nominee on his Electoral College victory in November. On the contrary: Republicans should behave like the political entrepreneurs they are. They should be thrilled with the idea of dominating the White House in 2013 and the Senate in 2015. They should be delighted that they will have the president's ear, will be the sole committee chairmen, and will have the power to confirm and fire cabinet members. The conventional wisdom about big business is that their fortunes are usually cyclical. If oil prices are high in late 2008 or early 2009, they will fall. If oil prices are low, they will rise. If the Republican Party supports less regulation, they will get a boost. If Republicans support more regulation, they will pay a price. But Republicans should celebrate the fact that, in 2011 and 2012, their arguments on the issues have resonated with voters. After years of watching economic crises unravel and leading the public to blame Wall Street and the administration and then to attach blame to the budget deficit, even the Occupy Wall Street movement and the tea parties diminished in intensity. As a result, many people are in a more receptive mood now, and this is a good time to invest. We are about to go through another period of economic growth and job creation. This is our opportunity to go to the public and explain the wealth and power we now have. This is a time of great opportunity for us to be as bold as the right-
