Be sure to check out the details here Rare Pokemon WishList I've been collecting Pokemon from Generation I through VI (I couldn't find a boxed game for VII but it wasn't that difficult). I currently have like 30 pokémon (I didn't take a screenshot because I wanted to post this early), but I plan on collecting ALL 120 (hopefully) in the near future. I'd like to get at least one EV'd Pokemon of every type (EV's and IV's combined) and a shiny (if possible). I'm also going to include battle cards. With this goal in mind, I would like to be a part of this list (in order of how good they are) 100 pokémon: Only requirement is the ability to catch them all in the given Generation, including getting at least one EV'd/shiny/Battle Card pokemon. If you have an excellent way to get an EV'd pokemon, then you're in. 100 + Ev'd / + Shiny: Only requirement is to be able to EV train and catch a shiny pokemon. There's no way you can have an EV'd/shiny pokemon with the stats it needs to be a perfect 5-star. Also I do not mean just some random EV'd pokemon you got from a RNG. 100 + Shiny: Only requirement is to be able to EV train and catch a shiny pokemon. You can use the GZIPInputStream class to decompress a GZIP archive with a single underlying stream. To use this feature, first create a GZIPInputStream object and load the GZIP file into the underlying stream. Then call the close method to close the underlying stream and close the GZIPInputStream. The GZIPInputStream constructor will use the default "uncompressed" stream buffer (by default 16384 bytes). You can change the default buffer size with setDefaultBufferSize. If you want a larger buffer, you can also create your own subclass of GZIPInputStream and set that as the subclass of GZIPInputStream in your ClassLoader. 04aeff104c
